DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The rowhouse is three bays wide and three stories high. Fenestration is flat, symmetrical and proportional, and the roof is flat. Wrought iron railings delineate a space between the house and the sidewalk and decorate either side of the eight marble steps that lead to the entrance. The marble foundation wall, surmounted by a shallow, marble water table, is punctuated by two flat basement windows double hung with two over two lights.

The left bay of the first story facade is punctuated by flat wood single light double doors surmounted by a flat single light transom. The doors surmount a marble stoop and, with the transom, are encased in a decorative painted wood flat surround. It is surmounted by a pediment supported by decorative brackets. The window treatment punctuating the other two bays of this facade is identical in design to the window treatment of the rest of the facade. In either bay the window is double hung with two over two lights, rests on a marble sill, and is surmounted by a painted wood window hood embellished with dentals and supported by brackets. Each bay of either upper story facade is punctuated by a window. A painted wood cornice supported by six wood brackets surmounts the building facade with dentals and extra molding.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The rather ornate house was constructed in the middle portion of the nineteenth century. The detailed window hoods, door pediment and cast iron railing are indicative of the quality of architecture and wealth of this once suburban Baltimore community.
